Robert C. Feldman and Mark Salvetti have joined the board of directors at Stirling Properties. Feldman, who currently teaches at UCLA Law School, is the former founder of the Dallas office of Weil, Gotshal & Manges. He has been an advisor to Stirling Properties for more than 20 years and will serve a three-year term. Salvetti is director of project management for Stirling Properties, where he has coordinated such projects as the new interchange at I-12 and Brewster Road in Covington and development of the Borders bookstore on St. Charles Avenue in New Orleans. He will serve a one-year term. "We look forward to the addition of these two gentlemen to our board," says Stirling CEO and President Marty Mayer. "They will bring many years of experience, insight and perspective to Stirling, which will be so valuable during these times of significant change." Feldman and Salvetti join board Chairman Jimmy Maurin and members Roger Ogden, Mayer, Chip Songy, Lewis Stirling and Grady Brame.
