Hammond Chamber of Commerce's spring Music in the Square will feature the Verge of Truth band Saturday from 4 to 7 p.m. at Hammond Square.

Verge of Truth offers '80's and '90s music ranging from Stevie Nicks to Journey, said board Chairman Michelle Gallo of CASA.

The concert will be in the parking lot area next to East of Italy and Nagoya restaurant.

Hammond Square restaurants will give specials for concert attendees.

The Hammond Chamber of Commerce invites people to bring their lawn chairs and picnic gear and enjoy Saturday at this free event.

This month's performance is the last of six free monthly music events, which kicked off last September. After a summer hiatus, Music in the Square will be back in the fall with a monthly concert starting in September and finishing in November.

"We've added some great new bands to the lineup so there's something for everyone to enjoy," Gallo said.

"Part of the chamber's mission is to promote community development. By providing free family events, like Music in the Square, we feel we are accomplishing that objective and making a positive impact in our community," Gallo said. "I must also recognize Charter Business, Charter Communications, Star Equipment, and Stirling Properties for being our sponsors for these events."
