Renovations Complete at University Club Golf Course Club & Resort Business - Online

09/21/2010

Stirling Properties, the management firm for University Club, Baton Rouge, La., and the exclusive sales and marketing firm for University Club Plantation, recently celebrated the newly renovated 18-hole championship golf course.

PGA Pro David Toms unveiled the redesign at a special event for University Club Plantation residents, club members, and those interested in membership on September 16th.

The renovation project began nine months ago through the support of the LSU Golf program and the Tiger Athletic Foundation. Golf course architect, Jim Lipe along with David Toms designed a course that now includes a new set of championship tees, expanded lakes, the addition of over 500 trees, and a par 72 layout that extends to approximately 7,600 yards.

Adding these features will test a player's accuracy, allow members to play from distances that match their skill level, and provide challenging options for collegiate, amateur and professional tournament play.
